

CEO SPEAK

Mark Clive
General Secretary & CEO

The cool December morning breeze reminds me of Christmas. I have shifted to the official residence of the General Secretary. And chirping of early morning birds in this beautiful NDY campus reminds me of Joy to the World with those lovely lines of heaven and nature sing. It will be my first Christmas as a resident of the campus with several colleagues. And I am excited at the prospect of sharing the love and blessings of the Lord on this occasion.

But for the pandemic the festivities would have been different. I am sure there would have been several rounds of late night carolling, bonfire and parties. But it is going to be a different Christmas this time. I am absolutely sure that the good times will come again.

I am looking forward to an online Pipe Organ concert, which some members and staff have put together. On December 12 five top organists in the country and one from Bonn in Germany will play Christmas music on Zoom platform. There are other events lined up too.

It is also to remind you all to be present in large number for the Annual General Meeting on December 5 at 5:15 pm.

As you are aware the pandemic has resulted in economic downfall all over. It has impacted NDY too. The management has taken appropriate steps and all of us have to face some hardship. But then life has to go on.

During these difficult times the President and the Board have spent considerable time trying to find a way out. Secretaries, Executives and staff have also put up a brave face. I am sure we will sail through and this shall also pass.

God bless all

FOUNDER PRESIDENT OF AHMEDABAD YMCA NO MORE

New Delhi YMCA mourns the passing away of Dr John Geevarghese, President of the Ahmedabad International Centre, Ahmedabad.

A noted philanthropist, John was founder president of the Ahmedabad YMCA. He took the leadership to purchase 10 Acres of land and mobilised huge resources for the establishment of YMCA International Centre. It is the largest sports facility in Ahmedabad.

Spread out 4-lakh square feet, YMCA International Centre will remain as a living monument of John's contribution to the YMCA Movement and to the community.

Some of Bollywood's leading singers like Sonu Nigam, Hariharan, Alka Yagnik, and Udit Narayan have performed there.

As a business tycoon, John established big presence in the electronics and home appliances retail chain in the state. He also established educational institutions including a university.

Some time in 1991, the leading members of the Association of South Indians in Ahmedabad approached John and told him that the school they were running was in financial difficulties. Initially he was not keen to interfere but some time later took over the management.

Soon, John put all his efforts to make the school a success. Then he started another one. Now there are five schools. Then he ventured into colleges and set up the JG (his initials) International School. Now there are 25 colleges all over the state. In total, there are 12,500 students, of which 4,700 are in the schools. The schools are run almost in a philanthropic way. He also looked after the cost of uniforms, books, and travel of deserving students. John also set up a Performing Arts College, which offers Bachelor's and Master's degrees in classical dance, drama, and music.

World YMCA has entered into two new partnership agreements in two of its four main areas of impact: health and the environment.

"We are expanding our scope to collaborate for bigger impact, while advocating for a more active role for young people in facing the challenges of our times", said Secretary-General Carlos Sanvee.

In health, its agreement with The Global Fund to fight AIDS, tuberculosis and malaria will focus on malaria education and advocacy; and in the environment, its agreement with the Worldwide Fund for Nature will empower young people to be active agents of climate action.

Under World YMCA's agreement with the Worldwide Fund for Nature the two organisations will work together to promote young people's meaningful participation in sustainable development, as guided by the Agenda 2063 and the Sustainable Development Goals (SDG), and specifically in the areas of conservation, biodiversity and the WWF's New Deal for Nature and People WWF and World YMCA have already worked together in October this year on the Youth led Solutions Summit for Climate Change.

"It is inspiring to see the enthusiasm of young people in the search for solutions to climate change and protecting our planet", said WWF International Director General Marco Lambertini. "Empowering them to work on these solutions is vital if we are to build a more sustainable future, for people and planet. I am looking forward to our on going collaborations with World YMCA."

YMCA is committed to helping young people overcome barriers to accessing quality health education and services to improve their holistic wellbeing in spirit, mind and body.

Every young person has the ability to contribute to improving their own health and the health of the communities in which they live. Through YMCA programmes, young people care for their physical, spiritual and mental health.

Pope Francis has selected Caren Rodrigues, assistant professor at St Joseph's Institute of Management, Bengaluru, as a delegate to the global summit Economy of Francesco commission.

The Economy of Francesco is a one-time, international, council-style event to address the challenges of current economic models, starting from the thoughts of young experts. The aim of the event is to create and promote a 'common covenant', a new global economic model, which has concern for the environment, the dignity of workers, and justice for the poor.

The invitation to participate came directly from Pope Francis to young people in two categories: researchers in economics and related disciplines, and experts in business.

Caren is selected in the researcher category by an expert committee evaluated thousands of applications from more than 120 countries and many religions.

At the Economy of Francesco, Caren is part of the 'Management and Gift' research sub-group. Her proposal was selected to be presented as one of the 12 best proposals that would help the world move forward through the Economy of Francesco, and will be promoted to national governments, international agencies and organizations. Caren proposes a new HRM paradigm that can serve as a gift to employees while creating economic value for organizations.

Caren's research integrates the fair principles of the free market with organizational social responsibility and other practices that promote the common good.

Emma Osmundsen (YMCA England and Wales) has been elected as President of YMCA Europe, succeeding outgoing President Mike Will (YMCA Scotland). Quoting US Vice-President-elect Kamala Harris, Osmundsen said, "I may be the first woman in this role, but I will not be the last". She cited Patricia Pelton as the first woman President of World YMCA, and said how her roots in the Girl Guide Movement bequeathed her the preparedness with which she takes up the YMCA Europe role.

EMMA FIRST WOMAN YMCA EUROPE PRESIDENT

"We are 4,100 local YMCA branches in Europe, reaching over 2 million people a year", she said, "inspiring, uniting, and creating space for young people". She set out a vision based on Relevance, Representation, Relationship and Resilience, and — quoting St John's Gospel (chapter 10, verse 10) called on the YMCA to be "life-givers, Ministers of Life".

Raised in Wales and with Norwegian roots, Emma has over twenty-five years of experience in the world of construction, having studied Building and Surveying at UWE Bristol and qualified as a Chartered Building Surveyor in 1993.

She has gone on to become one of the leading global voices in the development and delivery of low energy, healthy and climate resilient homes and buildings (including being a champion of high performance Passivhaus standards within building).

Outside of work, Emma is heavily involved both locally and nationally as a Trustee for YMCA. She is a Church Warden at St David's Church in Exeter and is a keen fan of the outdoors (citing white-water rafting, fly-fishing and mountaineering in the Cairngorms as some of her passions).

She is passionate about championing and supporting women in the world of property and construction.

This year, the World Council of Churches (WCC) is highlighting the links between the household of God, and the fundamental need to make our homes safe and loving spaces.

The "16 Days" campaign is an annual international initiative that began on November 25, the International Day for the Elimination of Violence against Women, and will end on December 10, the Human Rights Day.

In a unified statement, the 17 ambassadors reflect on why it is so important to protect those who are vulnerable and abused. "We can create safe spaces for all people who are targets of this violence, especially women and girls in our societies," reads the message. "We should promote transformative masculinities and femininities based on respect and equality."

The message also honours

"THE RESOLVE TO END GENDER-BASED VIOLENCE MUST REMAIN STRONG" resistance and resilience to violence, and expresses a vision of a world without fear of sexual and gender-based harassment, abuse and violence.

"And with on going physical restrictions due to the spread of the coronavirus, violence against women and girls has intensified," the message reads. "The resolve to end gender-based violence must remain strong."

The Thursdays in Black ambassadors, in their various spaces, are working to effect change in policies and practices in churches, workplaces and communities.

"Together with the WCC we are actively involved in preparing liturgies and Bible studies, which challenge attitudes and norms that foster gender-based violence," reads their message. "As people of faith and of goodwill, we appeal to individuals and community agencies to stop the spread of gender-based violence."

HUMAN RIGHTS AWARD FOR PANDEMIC HEROES

The Human Rights Commission will honour pandemic heroes in the Turks and Caicos Islands for their kind gestures and helping others in need as the world continues to face the coronavirus pandemic.

The felicitation ceremony for the award winners is slated to take place on International Human Rights Day on December 10.

According to Sabrina Green, Director Human Rights, "This year is quite an extraordinary one and with the pandemic we had so many persons and organizations who stepped up to the plate when persons needed essential items like pantry items and we've had so many food drives."

Green added: "For those persons out there they are unsung heroes, and I am sure that they didn't do it to get any recognition, but I think it would be an excellent gesture if we can highlight these individuals that gave selflessly to assist others that are in need." The Human Rights Director added that in the midst of all that is going on; this event will be good for everyone to celebrate people doing good work around us.
